BERNHARD LANG (1957 / Vienna, AU)

GAME 2-4-5 Music Theater for 4 Singers, Electric Guitar, Ambisonics & lights

In Autumn 2016, I started a new series of pieces called "Series Six: Theory of Games", the first being GAME ONE: S.O.S (self-organizing systems); this series is based on the ideas of Game theory, as outlined in Neumann/Morgenstern's "Theory of Games and Economic Behavior"; since then I wrote 3 pieces: GAME ONE, GAME 3-4-3 and GAME 4-4-4.

Now HYOID and me are working on a continuation of this research in the context of music theater, involving the line-up of 4 Voices and one Electric Guitar with live electronics, named GAME 2-4-5.

The piece shall explore the notion of self-organization in both a musical and choreographic context: which means, the musicians have to make decisions during the piece/game, creating open structures of narration; the texts are presently thought to be self-referential, which means the usage of original quotations from game theory, from Wittgenstein's late writings on Sprachspiel, and the psychoanalytical interpretations of Sprachspiel by Lorenzen.

Since the music of GAME 2-4-5 is referencing to polyphonic music of the 15th and 16th centuries, there arose the idea to create virtual cathedrals by composed lighting, and furthermore by a sophisticated spatialization (ambisonics), we would like to be integrated thanks to our partnership with Robin Meier and IRCAM.

Since most games include structures of repetition, this may be also be considered as a continuation of our research into the essence of repetition, which we already had joined in within our work Difference/Repetition 26 "The Exhausted", based on Deleuze's "L'Épuisé" (piece Fabienne Seveillac premiered with soundinitiative in Australia in September 2015).

The duration is presently estimated to be 50 minutes.
